Worksheet 1: What is Democracy?

Worksheet 2: What is a Free and Fair Election?

Worksheet 3: What is Voting?
WHAT IS DEMOCRACY?

There are many definitions for democracy. But democracy is about equality, freedom and human rights.

In a democracy, all people must have the freedom to:

- vote for the party of their choice
- talk about the things they believe in, without being intimidated or arrested
- meet together with other people, without being intimidated or arrested
- practise any religion they choose
- choose not to belong to any political party

In a democracy, all people must have equality in:

- access to education
- human rights
- social services, such as pensions

If the government is to be democratic, there must be:

- tolerance
- representation
- an opposition party
- accountability
WHAT IS DEMOCRACY?

the freedom to hold rallies

the freedom to vote

equal education

listening to different people’s views

Activity:
Explain to the learners other things that democracy allows. Then ask the learners to match the slogan with its meaning.

WHAT IS AN ELECTION?

An election is when all adults in a country choose (elect) a government or a constituent assembly. A government is the group of people who then run the country. An election can also be held to elect a constituent assembly. A constituent assembly is a group of people who will work together for a short time to draw up the Constitution of the country. When a country decides to have a new government and wants to change the constitution, it elects a constituent assembly.

The party that most people choose, wins the election. This party will then govern the country until another election is held. Elections for the government are usually held every four or five years. In this way, an election can be a way of changing a bad government.

WHAT IS A FREE AND FAIR ELECTION?

An election is free if the voter has the freedom to vote for the person or party of their own choice. This must be done without fear, interference or threats from anyone. Parties and candidates should also be able to hold meetings freely, without being disrupted and intimidated.

An election is fair if all parties have the same opportunities to explain their policies at meetings, to advertise in the newspapers, radio and TV and to have their leaders appear on TV. The people who organise the election should make sure that all parties have equal time to speak on radio and TV.

A group of people, known as the election authority, organises and supervises the election to make sure that the election is free and fair.

Activity:
Ask the learners how often they see or hear each political party on the TV, in newspapers, or on the radio. Next to each party's name and symbol, ask the learners to write "often", "sometimes" or "never" under the three headings to show how often they see or hear the party's representatives speak. Then discuss with the learners the right of political parties to have equal access to media, and why this is important in a free and fair election.

WHAT IS VOTING?

Before an election each political party will have a 'manifesto' which says what they want to do if they win the election and become the new government. People must find out all they can about the different parties and all the promises that they are making. Once people know what each party is promising, they can then make a decision as to which one they will vote for. When you listen to all the promises the different political parties are making, you must also decide whether they will be able to do the things they promise.

When you vote, you are given a paper with a list of the names of political parties and you have to make a mark next to the party of your choice. This paper is called a ballot paper. The ballot is secret. No-one will see who you voted for. No-one has the right to ask you who you voted for. This is the best way to vote for a government as nobody can see who voted for which party.

WHAT THE VOTE CAN DO FOR YOU?

After the election, the new government is then expected to carry out its promises. It is also important to realise that the new government is then accountable to you. The new government should do all the things that they promised to do.

After the election, they should call meetings and report to you about what they are planning to do, then ask for your opinions. It is important that these meetings take place and that people attend them so that there are always discussions before very important decisions are made by the government.
WHAT IS VOTING

Activity:
Discuss with the learners what voting is and what voting will change. Ask the learners to cross out the incorrect words (either "will" or "will not"), in each of the sentences.

What can the vote do for me?

1. The new government will/will not be accountable to people.
2. Each family will/will not be given a house.
3. Each child will/will not be given a good education.
4. All the people will/will not choose a new government.

1. Uhulumeni uzobophezeleka/ ngeke abophezeleke kubantu.
2. Umndeni ngamunye uzonikezwa/engeke unikezwe indlu.
3. Ingane ngayinye izothola/engeke ithole imfundo enhle.
WHO CAN VOTE?

Worksheet 1: Who Can Vote?

Worksheet 2: You Will Need an Identity Document
WHO CAN VOTE?

We expect that people who will have the right to vote will be:

* Women and men who are 18 years old and older.

* South African citizens.

* People who have Identity Documents (ID).

In some countries, people have to register with a local office before the election day. This does not happen in every country. We are not sure how it will be here, but people will have to read newspapers or listen to the radio or watch television - as the procedure will be announced.

It is very important to be informed because, even if you are a citizen and at the right age to vote, you can still miss the chance to vote if you do not know all the rules.

You do not have to join a political party to vote. You cannot be forced to join a political party to vote.
WHY DO YOU NEED AN IDENTITY DOCUMENT?

An ID will prove that:
~ you are a South African citizen
~ your are at the right age to vote

HOW TO GET AN ID:
1. You need to give the Department of Home Affairs proof of your birth.
   The following documents can be used:
   - an old Reference Book
   - a birth certificate
   - baptismal certificate
   - clinic cards from when you were a baby
   - primary school letters
   - an old house permit showing your name
   - a letter from the inkosi of the area in which you were born
   - a letter from the owner of the farm where you were born.

2. You will also need 2 identity document photographs (they are black and white).

3. Go and fill in a form from your nearest Home Affairs office. If you cannot fill in the form, ask someone from that office to help you.

4. Your finger prints will be taken.

5. If it is your first ID, you do not have to pay.
   If not, it will cost R3.

6. If all your documents are in order, it will take two to three months before you receive your ID.

WHEN AND WHERE DO YOU VOTE

Worksheet 1: When Do You Vote?
Where Do You Vote?
WHERE DO YOU VOTE?

Polling stations are set up in every area at different places such as schools, community centres, public buildings and church halls, so that people do not have to travel far to cast their vote. People normally vote at the polling stations closest to their homes or place of work.

WHEN DO YOU VOTE?

Polling stations are open on the day that the election takes place, from early in the morning to quite late at night. This is so that everybody is given a chance to get to the polling station to vote. In some countries, the polling stations remain open for a few days.

If people are ill or too old to get to the polling station, or are out of the country on the election day, they are still allowed to vote. What happens in this situation is that people are given a special vote. It is very important if you want a special vote that you contact the election authority before election day to arrange this special vote.
WHERE DO YOU VOTE?  WHEN DO YOU VOTE?

A polling station is the name of the place where you vote.

A polling station can be at a church.

A polling station can be at a school.

You can vote all day.

You can vote before you go to work.

You can vote after work until late at night.

Activity:
Discuss with learners why polling stations will be at community halls, schools and churches. Allow each learner to choose the best time for them to vote.

Finish the sentence:

A polling station can be at ____________ ( my home, a church, a community hall, a shop )

The best time for me to vote is ____________ ( before work, during the day, at lunch, after work )

HOW DO YOU VOTE?

Worksheet 1: Who is Who?

Worksheet 2: What Do the Monitors Do?

Worksheet 3: Identifying yourself

Worksheet 4: Casting Your Vote

Worksheet 5: Counting the Votes
Activity:
Explain to the learners what each official does and why it is important for fair and free elections. Ask the learners to circle each of the people listed below, giving them the correct number.

1. umuntu ophethe epolling station
2. umuntu onikeza amabollot papers
3. umuntu ogada ukubalwa kwamaphetheza okuvota
4. umuntu ogada ukuthi kungabikho ukusabisa abantu

1. the person in charge of the polling station
2. the person who gives you the ballot paper
3. the person who watches the counting of the votes
4. the person who makes sure that no-one is intimidated
THE ROLE OF MONITORS

It is important to understand what monitors do and why they do it. Monitors are there to make sure that the election is free and fair. They do not represent any political party.

Their job is to make sure that:

~ voters are given one ballot paper

~ voters put one ballot paper into the ballot box

~ the ballot boxes are sealed as soon as voting has finished

~ no-one puts extra ballot papers into the ballot boxes

~ all the ballot boxes are handed over to have the votes counted

~ the votes are counted correctly

~ the votes are recorded correctly

~ the true results are announced

The monitors are not allowed to watch the voters in the booths when they mark the ballot paper. It is not their job to know who voted for which party. This is secret.
WHAT DO THE MONITORS DO?

1. Counting the votes is ______________________.
2. Marking the ballot paper is ______________________.
3. Putting the ballot paper in the box is ______________________.
1. Ukubala amavoti ______________________.
2. Ukubhala ephepheni lokuvota ______________________.
3. Ukufaka iphepha lokuvota ebhokisini ______________________.

Activity:
Discuss with the learners why monitors are needed in an election. Ask the learners to finish the sentence correctly, writing 'secret' or 'not secret'.

No-one is watching you in the booth
VOTER IDENTIFICATION

1. You might have to stand in a queue when you arrive at the polling station.

2. The election officials will be sitting at tables inside the polling station. Voters need to show these officials their identity documents so that they can prove that they qualify to vote. That means that they are of the right age and that they are South African citizens.

3. Other forms of identification that may be used are:
   - an old reference book
   - a baptismal certificate
   - a birth certificate
   - primary school records
   - an old house permit showing your name

4. The official will mark the voter’s hand with invisible ink that is harmless. This ink will stay on your hand for a couple of days, but you will not be able to see it. Before the voter’s hand is marked, the official will ask the voter to put his hands under a special light to see that the voter has not voted before. If the voter has voted before, this light will show the invisible ink and the voter will not be allowed to vote again. This is why the invisible ink is used. In some countries they do not use invisible ink.
IDENTIFYING YOURSELF

Activity:
The week before this class, discuss with the learners about the different types of identification. Ask the learners to bring some identification with them to class next time. When they arrive, ask the learners to form a queue and mark them off the class list as they show their identification.

1. Ngingasebenzisa amakhadi aseklinitami ukufakazela ukuthi yimi uqobo (TRUE/FALSE)
2. Uyinki ngeke usuke esandleni sami (TRUE/FALSE)
3. Ngingavota kanye (TRUE/FALSE)
4. Uyabonakala uyinki esandleni sami (TRUE/FALSE)

1. I can use my clinic cards to identify myself (TRUE/FALSE)
2. I can vote once (TRUE/FALSE)
3. You can see the ink on my hand (TRUE/FALSE)
4. The ink will never come off my hand (TRUE/FALSE)
HOW TO CAST A VOTE

1. The Ballot Clerk will give the voter a ballot paper - this is a piece of paper with all the political parties names on it, and a row of blocks next to each name.

2. The voter will take this ballot to the voting booth. In this voting booth, the voter will make a cross in the block next to the party that they want to vote for.

3. The voting booth is a private area where voters go to make their mark on the ballot paper. Voters must remember, this is a secret ballot so nobody must be with them in the booth. Disabled voters may be helped into the voting booth.

4. The voter must make sure of who they want to vote for before they make the cross. If you have made a mistake you cannot cross it out. If you do cross it out then it means that you have spoilt your vote and it cannot be used.

5. After the voting each voter will fold their ballot paper and then put it in the ballot box. The ballot box has been checked, sealed, and locked before voting began. No-one can touch the ballot papers until the election officials are ready to count.

Remember that the vote is secret - nobody can force the voter to vote for their party. The voter’s name does not appear anywhere on the ballot and therefore nobody can ever find out who they have voted for. They do not have to tell anyone who they have voted for.
You are given a ballot paper

Make your cross in the polling booth

Activity:
Give each learner a ballot paper. Ask them to secretly make a cross next to the party they want. Put the papers into a box and mix them. Empty the papers onto a table. Ask the learners if they can see who voted for who by looking at the crosses. This will show that no-one can identify their paper. If there are any spoilt ballots, point them out to the learners.

WHAT HAPPENS AFTER EVERYONE HAS VOTED?

Before the counting of the votes begins, the returning officer must show officials that the seals on the ballot boxes have not been broken. The returning officer is the only person who can break the seals so that the ballots can be counted under supervision.

The ballot box is opened and the votes are counted. Party officials and monitors must be present when the votes are being counted. The ballots may be counted twice to make sure that the final totals are correct.

When the counting is finished, the presiding officer tells the public the results. These are also broadcast on the radio, television and in the newspapers.

WHAT HAPPENS TO THE PARTIES THAT DO NOT HAVE THE MOST VOTES?

The party or parties that do not win an election, are known as the "opposition".

Having an opposition party is what makes a democracy work. This is because the opposition then become "watchdogs", making sure that the government respects the constitution and prevent a government from taking too much power or abusing its power. It will also mean that not only the voices of the people who voted for the winning party will be heard in parliament.

WHAT IS PROPORTIONAL REPRESENTATION?

They think that the system that will be used will be called proportional representation. This means that people will vote for a political party. The number of votes gained by the different political parties in the election determines how many seats each party gets in parliament. However parties need to get a minimum percentage (eg 3-5%) for them to be represented in parliament. This system allows more than one party to be in parliament. The party that gets the highest number of votes gets the highest number of seats in parliament. Before an election, each political party draws up a list of their candidates.

For example, if there are 100 seats in parliament they will have 100 names on the list. If a party wins by 60%, then it will mean that that party is entitled to have 60 people in parliament. Normally the first 60 people on the list will be chosen.

It is very important that everyone reads the newspapers or watches television, or listens to the radio closer to the time so that we all know exactly what will happen.
WHAT IS PROPORTIONAL REPRESENTATION?

Activity:
Use this exercise to help the learners to understand percentages and how these are used in proportional representation to make up parliament. Ask the learners to put an arrow and the party’s name next to the number of seats they would be given, according to these election results.

for example,

Party A ———

HOW IS THE OPPOSITION PARTY FORMED?

Under a system of proportional representation, there will be a number of political parties in parliament. Any party with a minimum percentage of the votes will be given seats in parliament.

When the election results are announced, each party will be given a percentage, according to the number of votes they received in the election. The party with the most votes receives the highest percentage, and the highest number of seats in parliament. This party will become the new government.

The party with the next highest number of votes will become the opposition party. All the other parties who receive above the minimum percentage of votes (eg. 3-5%) will also be given seats in parliament and will join the opposition.

The role of the opposition party is very important. It must make sure that the government respects the law and the constitution, and that the government does not waste taxpayers money. Even if the party that you voted for does not become the new government, it will have an important job to play as part of the opposition.
WHAT IS THE OPPOSITION PARTY?

Activity:
Explain to the learners what the opposition party will do. Using these election results, ask the learners to make a list of all the parties who will make up the opposition. Ask them to circle the main party in the opposition and then to put an arrow next to the total number of seats that the opposition party will have.

WHAT IS A CONSTITUTION?

It is a written document drawn up by the representatives of the people, containing descriptions of those laws and values by which the country is run.

A constitution does several things:

1. It describes the structure of the government.
A constitution describes the different sections of government and what they will do. A constitution usually divides the government into four different groups:

* The Cabinet:
The cabinet makes decisions about plans and actions, and develops policies. It includes the President (if there is a President), Ministers of Parliament and the Prime Minister. This group is called the cabinet.

* The Parliament:
The parliament or legislature makes laws. It consists of the elected representatives of the people.

* The Civil Service:
The civil service carries out the policy decisions of the cabinet and the laws passed by the parliament. It includes all those who work for the government.

* The Judiciary:
The judiciary makes sure that the laws that the legislature makes are followed. It includes those people who work in the courts, such as judges and magistrates.
WHAT IS A CONSTITUTION?

It describes the structure of the government.

Activity:
Discuss with the learners the structure of a factory.
Compare each of the roles to the structures of a government. Ask the learners to fill in the blank boxes with "Judiciary", "Parliament", "Civil Service" and "Cabinet", according to the current government structure.

Judiciary: people who work in the courts, for example, judges and magistrates.

Parliament: the representatives that the people have elected.

Civil Service: everyone who works for the government.

Cabinet: includes the State President, Ministers of Health, Finance, Law and Order, Constitutional Affairs, etc.
WHAT IS A CONSTITUTION?

1. It describes the relationship between the four different parts of government.
   * In a democratic constitution, it is important that the cabinet is accountable to parliament.
   * The judiciary needs to be independent so that people outside of government can test the way that laws are applied. If the judiciary is independent, then it will be able to disagree with the laws that the government try to make, and tell the government that the law can not work.
   * A constitution must say which group has the final say on matters of constitution and law.

2. It describes the relationship between the four different parts of government.
   * In a democratic constitution, it is important that the cabinet is accountable to parliament.

3. It describes the collection and use of finances.
   This means that it must give a structure, such as parliament, the power to collect taxes and the rights to spend this money on running the country. This is very important as the government cannot provide things like education or pensions without this money. But a constitution should not set out any particular economic policy. We need to be able to change economic policies according to the needs of the people.
WHAT IS A CONSTITUTION?

It shows the relationship between government structures.

Activity:
Ask the learners to discuss the relationship between current government structures, using the diagram from the last worksheet. Who should decide how taxes are spent? Should the State President have the final say? Ask the learners to each draw a diagram for a new government structure, either individually, or in small groups. Each diagram should then be presented to the whole group. Ask the learners to discuss until a majority agrees on one structure. Explain to the learners that this exercise is similar to the work of the Constituent Assembly, as they draw up a new constitution.

For example,

!Diagram

or,

WHAT IS A CONSTITUTION?

4. It describes how the constitution can be changed.

To protect certain sections of the constitution from being changed without consultation, important sections should be made difficult to change. This can be done by:

* saying that it can only be changed if two-thirds of the members of parliament agree to the change; or
* it can only be changed once the people have agreed to the change in a referendum.

5. A constitution must set out whether it will be unitary or federal.

* A federal constitution gives the different regions of a country power to run their own affairs.
* A unitary constitution gives the central government power over the different regions of the country.
WHAT IS A CONSTITUTION?

It can only be changed by a two-thirds majority.

Circle two of the three boys (two-thirds)

Circle four of the six flowers (2/3)

Activity:
Bring several boxes of matches to class. Ask the learners to work in pairs, and give each pair a pile of matches. Ask them to count out three matches and then hold up two of those three. Explain that they are holding 2/3 of the three matches. Then ask them to count out six matches and hold up 2/3, then nine matches etc.

Explain that in order to change the constitution, at least two out of every three people in parliament must agree.

125 out of 200 votes
WHAT IS A BILL OF RIGHTS?

The constitution can include a Bill of Rights. This is the part of the constitution which will tell the people what rights they have and what ideas the government should follow.

In South Africa, the Freedom Charter and the Women’s Charter are similar to a Bill of Rights. They list a number of basic human rights, such as the right to education, housing, freedom of speech and equality.

The United States of America has a Bill of Rights in its constitution. If the Parliament makes a law which the constitution or Bill of Rights says is wrong, the courts can tell parliament that the law is wrong and it will not be carried out. This can mean that the Bill of Rights is more powerful than the elected government. For example, in the 1960’s black people in America challenged unjust laws in court because they went against what was written in the Bill of Rights. As a result, these laws were changed, making it illegal to discriminate against black people.

A Bill of Rights does not set out the details of laws. It can only say what ideas the country and its people believe in and think are important.

There are different types of rights that may be included in a Bill of Rights eg. Political Rights; Civil Rights; Social Rights; Women’s Rights; Economic Rights; and Environmental Rights.

Many Bills of Rights protect only political and civil rights. These rights are known as "first generation rights" because they are seen as the most important. The reason for this is that some countries cannot afford to give everyone, for example, economic rights.
WHAT IS A BILL OF RIGHTS?

It is the part of the constitution that talks about human rights.

Activity:
Ask the learners to list other rights that should be included in a South African Bill of Rights. Then ask them to prioritize the list (write them in order of importance, the most important is no.1 etc.) Help the learners to decide which rights are economic, political, civil, environmental. Which rights do they think should be "first generation"? Which rights do they think a new government will be able to afford?
